

STYLED SHOOT

The height of Summer

Opt for a sustainably-sourced celebration, with locally-grown blooms and seasonal touches

PHOTOGRAPHY: IMOGEN XIANA (IMOGENXIANA.COM)

Taking place during British Flowers Week, the floral details of this bridal shoot were inspired by UK-grown botanicals. Martha and The Meadow florist, Emma explains "I only used flowers sourced from my own local flower farmers in Dorset. They supplied gorgeous roses, along with whimsical herbs and strawberry leaves. It was a real joy to work with regional stems, and it reflected the feel of the venue we chose for the day."

And that was Wimbourne's charmingly laidback Deans Court. Its relaxed atmosphere was ideal for photographer Imogen's vision of a rustic linen-draped tablescape, featuring cream tapered candlesticks, subtle stationery, strawberry-topped glasses and flashes of hand-picked greenery. The bride's sweet tulle-skirted floorsweeper, wispy updo and barely-there make-up added to the beautifully understated styling. ▶

The relaxed, eco-friendly ethos of the shoot was influenced by the way the location, Deans Court, runs its estate.

"Our overarching concept was to portray the beauty of Deans Court in the high British summer and the simplicity of young romance."

The bee details were inspired by the fact that Deans Court makes its own honey using the orchard's 100-year-old hives.
